About Delfont Mackintosh Theatres

Founded over 30 years ago, Sir Cameron Mackintosh's Delfont Mackintosh Theatres Ltd owns and operates eight of the most prestigious theatres in London's West End: the Gielgud, Noël Coward, Novello, Sondheim, Prince Edward, Prince of Wales, Victoria Palace and Wyndham's.

Our goal is to offer audiences and artists an unparalleled theatrical experience and, through the refurbishment and conservation of our theatres, to provide an outstanding legacy for generations of theatregoers to come. To achieve this we: partner with world-class theatrical producers to showcase outstanding plays and musicals; engage, train, develop, empower and invest in the best staff; provide exceptional service and best value to audiences, producers and artists; refurbish, innovate, conserve and maintain our theatres to the highest possible standards; and have reputation, entertainment, service and commerciality at the forefront of everything that we do.

Employing more than 700 people, our ethos is as a group of unique musical- and play-houses with a shared culture and approach. We are determined to: create an environment in which we are all able to flourish and thrive; foster an ethos of inclusivity where everyone feels respected, valued and supported; promote a culture of wellbeing to improve mental health, resilience and productivity; and treat everyone equally so that every individual, whatever their background, may reach their full potential and contribute meaningfully to DMT's success.
